Mr. Cooper said he believed the Massachusetts form of ballot is better than the ballot marked by a rooster or a star or other mere party emblems where a boss can instruct his men to "vote for the emildem."

"If I may be allowed a personal reference," he continued, "I introduced in the Wisconsin legislature while serving there a bill to change the ballot so that every man would be allowe it to vote in secret. Senator Saulsbury asked Mr. Keeley:
"In order to qualify yourself as an expert, have you ever lived in a voting community where 28 per cent of the population is colored."

I do not think there would be any inger from the colored vote in the District of Columbia, provided there as a literary qualification, together with a residence qualification of perhaps two years, and perhaps some vo-cational qualification to indicate that the voter was not here living by his wits alone. I know the colored people of Washington pretty well, and I be-lieve they can be trusted, and I believe that Washington as a whole would re-sent the imputation that the colored people could not be trusted. vote does exist here, and, while I do not think that fear is justified, I believe a large proportion of the population would oppose the vote here for that reason alone."

Mr. Keeley said it undoubtedly was true that a large part of the population would oppose the ballot, giving as the reason fear of the colored vote; the reason given would be only a cloak to the real reason.

"The colored vote, I have tried to show," he said, "could not possibly have been responsible for the conditions which existed in Washington from 1868 until 1874, for the city was in the hands of the board of public works when the debt was forced upon the District. Senator Blackburn, when he spoke in the House in favor of the act of 1878, creating a new form of government for the District, was smarting because, under the old form of government with the board of public works in charge, the citizens of the District—most of those who had property here were southern sympathizers during the civil war—had been taxed heavily to make Washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not make washington a city to which northern wealth might be not might be not intended as a business and taxed as such; that a comm ssion partiy elective and partited States proyerty here m tion and to make the city over

"Yes," replied Mr. Keeley, who went on to declare that the District really had not had a popular form of govern-ment from 1871 to 1878, because the board of public works, which was in no way responsible to the people, was

Mr. Keeley said that Congress made the best retreat it could from a humiliating situation, when it changed the form of government here in 1878. "Don't blame the poor negroes of Washington for the troubles in 1871-74," he said. "They were due to President Grant and the board of public works."

Mr. Keeley said that the people today in Washington could not take a proper civic pride in the city. "It is governed by Commissioners appointed by the President," he said, "and the only thing the citizens can do here is to keep out of the way of the police.

He urged that some of the Commissioners be elected by the people and the others appointed by the President, and that a modern form of government be established here, giving the people a chance to express their views on public questions through the ballot.

"The half-and-half plan was born, not because of the reasons usually given, but because of calamities which were by no means due to popular government," said Mr. Keeley.

Arouse for Suffrage.

Argues for Suffrage.

Arguing for the establishment of sufrage in the District, Mr. Keeley said the people here do not appear to realtheir duties as citizens, that they would have to be taught these duties. Senator Works said he thought the lax manner in which citizens through-out the country looked on their politi-cal duties was a menace to the coun-cal duties was a menace to the country.

"But the question here is different from that of other cities," continued Senator Works. "Either we must make this city the capital of the nation and a national city, or we must make it a municipality with the government owning property here. We must make our choice between these two positions. We must decide if the city is to be turned over to a small portion of the people of the country, though it is the National Capital."

"I take sharp issue with you, Mr.

"I take sharp issue with you, Mr. Keeley," said Representative Gard, "in your contention that the people of the District do not recognize their duties as citizens. From personal observation I believe just the contrary."

Mr. Keeley then qualified his statement, saying that perhaps many persons here "who might be said to be in public life" probably did have regard to their public duties, but that he had referred to the great mass of workers in Washington.

Governed by Non-Residents.

A. J. McKelway, representing and chairman of the committee of forty on self-government in the District of Columbia, next addressed the joint select committee, reading from a statement already published in The Star. In addition he asked the joint select committe to consider a city such as New Orleans, about the same size as Washington. He said that if any one should recommend that the city of New Orleans should be governed by a commission of 509 men, none of whom were residents of the state of Louisiana, the

"Yes," replied Mr. McKelway, "I think state of the control of the nation should be interested, but I think the people of the District should be heard." Senator Works said that it might be that some day there would be District representation on the floors of Concress.

Subsidy in Place of Suffrage.

Mr. McKelway continued: "It is beause Congress pays so much of ou exes here that so many of our people lo not want a change of government. They have accepted this subsidy in lieu of suffrage. There is less public spiri here than in any city of the United States."

"I am surprised," interrupted Senator Works, "at the statement that has been made here several times that the people of the District of Columbia are lacking in civic pride. I have a different view entirely."

He added:

"I wish to be understood, however. I do not mean by these remarks that I am going to vote for a change in the form of government here. I merely want to express myself on the matter of an honest ballot."

"There is a public spirited element here, I admit," Mr. McKelway said, "but the mass of people are not interested."
"I doubt that." Senator Works re-

Germany has asked the American commission for relief in Belgium to indertake in Poland relief measures similar to those taken in Belgium, Officials of the State Department have een informed that the commission has been told that between twenty and thirty millions of people in that part are destitute and in dire need. To ade quately care for them would mean, was said an expenditure of approxi mately $20,000,000 a month. Substan tial negotiations are said to be pro ceeding, despite almost enormous difficulties

In addition to the financing of such relief measures, it was pointed out, the commission would have considerable trouble in regard to transportation and distribution of supplies and cloting.

No Danger of Confiscation.

All danger of having relief supplies confiscated by men under arms, or of supplies never reaching destination, was said to have been overcome. The arrangement would be the same as that which prevailed in Belgium.

The State Department will not have to be consulted should the commission finally decide to undertake the work. Germany and Russia are reported willing that such work should be placed in the hands of Americans.

BRYAN ON WAY TO CLEVELAND

Whirlwind Campaign for Prohibition Ends With Speech Tonight.

DAYTON, Ohio, October 30.-William Bryan left here early this morning on the last leg of his six-day speaking tour of Ohio in behalf of prohibition. On the way to Cleveland, where the final meeting of the former Secretary's whirlwind campaign will be held tonight, the special campaign will be held tonight, the special train on which the Bryan party is traveling will stop at Trifin, Bucyrus, Mansfield, Wooster, Canton and Akron.

In his address here last night Mr. Bryan declared the presidency could not have meant as much to him as the part he has played in furthering the temperance cause. The speaker was told that a temperance parade, in which ten thousand Cleveland school children are to take part, will precede his speech in Cleveland tonight.

The medal score of the match was ordinary, the high wind playing havoc with Denfeld's game, and also blocked high-class golf by Dalzell.

In the other half of the semi-finals W. B. Mason defeated E. M. Talcott, 6 up and 5 to go. The wind was the only thing to mar conditions for play, as the course is in almost perfect shape, having dried out nicely during the past couple of days.

Denfeld and Dalzen were the first couple off, and, both being left-handed players, their drives were watched with considerable interest, as they were right in the teeth of the gale. Both got away nicely, Dalzell getting a low ball that carried well, while Denfield's was almost as good.

NATIONAL GUARD IS NOT FAVORABLE TO PROGRAM

Resents Idea That Continental Army Shall Be Second Line of Defense.

National Guard officers and regula army officers today continued their efforts to cement the breach over the proposal to form a so-called continental army to take the second line of defense of the country, the place now held by the National Guard. The national militia board, composed of militia offi cers, was in session all the morning in the office of Brig. Gen. Mills, chief of the militia division.

There is hope that the differences would be adjusted quickly. But it is apparent that the National Guard will not look with favor on any scheme to supplant it as a second line of defense Secretary Garrisen informed the committee that no impairment of the organized militia was contemplated and this led War Department officials to hope that an early agreement would be reached. It is known that those familiar with the militia will advocate a federalization of the body, so that the federa government could maintain control over to a large extent. However, some of the control would remain with the state, such as the appointment of offi cers. There are many problems to be wrestled with by the regular and the militia officers. When they come together on all details, if they do, then the Secretary of War again will take up the matter.
